

Vikki Beckner

I have vague memories of preschool at her home and playing around a table in the “big” room. At least it felt big to me.

My most vivid memories are of being in the home for piano lessons.

It's not so much the lesson itself but the experience of being in the Snodgrass home. I can still smell the tomato soup cooking for dinner.

It was interesting to watch a big family operate and experience Pauline being able to wear so many hats. What a remarkable woman she is.

She is a big part of my growing up years.

Always a friendly, loving person who knows how to experience life at its fullest!
